"Gad, how dangerous! He might have capped his pistol before the came. He—" "Fhat's so," rejoined the narrator. "But pretty soon Jack heard a noise, and could "And for your life, don't tell Betsey Jane!"

Mr. Nicodemus Harding, having uttered this caution in a low, earnest tone of voice, alighted from a Concord wagon in front of his own farm house door, and stood there a few minutes in a brown study, watching the figure of his brother-in-law and the lawyer, as he drove back towards the village of W—— whence the-two men had come.

"Don't tell Betsey Jane!"

Now, Betsey Jane was Mr. Nicodemus Harding's wife, a stirring, notable soul, less the heard a noise, and could see some men creeping up toward him through the darkness, They did not stop at his 'halt,' so he enapped his pistol twice at them without effect. Then quick as thought he pulled a cap from his boot leg, capped one nipple and fired, putting a bullet through the shoulder of his brother, who was in the party. Then he went for the crowd with his sabre, just as thoy began to laugh out of the wrong side of their mouths, and were crying for quarter. Jack's pluck was never questioned again; but this experiment cost his brother some Hadding's wife, a stirring, notable soul, and hearty, she "made the house work fig." to use her own energetic expression; and if Nicodemus Harding owned his farm that day, and was a well-to-do, in fact a rich man to boot, it was owing in no smell measure to the skill and energy and general go-a-headstaveness of his Botsey Jane. What was it, then, that the unsupplied was not about to tell her?

"It would never do, never!" thought Nicodemus to himself, shaking his head.
"She'd be wanting a new earpet, or a new salk gown, or the house all painted over, or some such nonsense. No, the woman is the weaker vessel, it won't do to trust one two far. Their heads won't bear it."

So Mr. Nicodemus passed through the is the weaker vessel, it won't do to trust one too far. Their heads won't bear it."

So Mr. Nicodemus passed through the house, and out toward the barn with the pre-oscupied air of a hen who has an egg to lay, and don't know where he can hide it from the eyes of mankind to the best advantage. The kitchen was empty and silent as he went through it. But oh! if he could have seen the buxom, good looking female who stole silently out of the pantry, and as silently followed him on his way toward the barn.

Mrs. Harding came back in about twenty minutes or so, with a face red from suppressed laughter.

Don't tell Betsey Jane," she said, it was to the product of the guard-house was, and I told him. As the guard-house was, and I told him. As the guard-house was, and I told him. As the guard-house was, and I told him. Don't tell Betsey Jane," she said, siggling into her gingham apron. "You are a pretty emart man, Nicodemus, and ay brother, Tim Novas is another. It is not some officer.

are a pretty emart man, Nicodemus, and my brother, Tim Noyes, is another, and a lawyer in the bargain. Don't tell Betsey Jane, indeed! Two wrotches, you deserve all you'll get pretty soon."

Betsey Jane said no more, but bided her time. A week passed away, and then brother Tim's wagon drove up again to the door, and Nicodemus stepped into it, and was off to the village once more. Betsey Jane had asked in vain to go.

Nicodemus was bound on business—"business which a woman could not understand," he loftily exclaimed. He, lord and master, well out of sight, Betsey Jane went about that business a woman could not understand, with a merry twinkle in her bright black eyes.

At four p. m. Nicodemus returned home argun, looking quite as important as before. He tip-toed along through the kitchen, Betsey Jane watching him from the corner of her eye all the while. He passed out into the shed. A fragrant smell of smoke came forward to great him the corner of burning or ra-cobe gradually curing ham.

Nicodemus turned deathly pale, and ran frantically forward to a large fire smouldering in the ash-house, and a large ham

Basiness. Well, I went up, knocked, sud the Colonel's voice bade me come in. He looked at me as I entered and I saluted him, but did not speak till he had finished what he was weiting. Them he gruffly asked, "are you the man that dismounted Gen. Sherman in a mud-puddle near the grard-house last night?" I told him I had dismounted some officer, but I had not seen his face. I was not supposed to know any one after sundour, and had only obeyed orders. "Turn over your equipments to the orderly, and report with this note at the General's headquarters." When Gen. Ertusbille Morning Decale (CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.) heaping up and covering from washing rains? These handsful of manure are more valuable to the cultivator than the separate grains of gold that the miner, with careful toil, gathers and washes from the earth and sand bank. He hunts gathers and ages them all and He hunts, gathers and saves them all, and thus accumulates his "pile." Philosophi-cal, successful cultivators, can see the glitter of gold even in the manure heap; they only wait a little longer than the mines for the pure gold to be washed out by the growing process instead of the wash-pan. "A word to the wise is sufficient."

The following sweet poem is from the pen of Ehillaber—"Mrs Partington"—and is a perfect picture of his childhood home. It is touchingly beautiful, and our readers will thank us for publishing it. A friend and townsman of Shillaber attests to the beauty and truthfulness of the picture, and they will thank him also for the pleasure this gem affords them:

There's a little low but by the river's aide, Within the sound of its rippling tide. It's walls are gray with the moses of years, And its roof all crimbled and o'd appears; But fairer to me than easile's pride. Is the little low hat by the river's side.

The little low but was my natal nest,
Where my childhood passed—Late's Spring-time
biest;
Where the hopes of ardent jouth were formed,
And the sun of province my joung heart warmed,
fire I threw norself on life's swittede,
And left the dear but by the river's side.

That little low hut, in lowly guise, Wis soft and grand to my youthful eyes, And fairer trees were ne'er known betwee Tam the spole trees by the humble door. That my father loved for their thrifty pride, Which shadowed the hut by the river's side.

The father revered and the children gay
The graves of the world have called away;
But quetly all slove there sis
By the pleasant window in summer and kinite,
An aged woman, long years allied
With the little low but by the river's side.

That little low but to the lonely wife Is the cherished stage of her active life, Each scene is recalled in memory's beam As ahe sits by the window in pensive dream, And joys and wees roll buck like a tide in that little low but by the river's side.

And form in a region beautified. The band that once met by the river's side.

No. 2—A longitudinal sectional view of a full Joint, showing the position of the wood in the socket whin wedged, a glance at which must convince the most skeptical of the superiority of this Joint over any pitter. No. 3—A view of the end of the Rod, when turned ready for the Socket to be driven on, with the slot for the wedge and the wedge about being entered. No. 4—Represents the ead of the wood, and shows the proper way to saw the slot iscress the grain into which the wedge is to be driven.

The showe description and accompanying cuts, will enable any skilled person to make connection at the wells in a much shorter time than can be done with any other Rod, and the tools required being a small fine saw, one of our bullow sugers and a few of our wedges. The wedges can be procured at any hardware store, gratia
